The first item of business for the meeting was to select a chair, and I was chosen by unanimous acclamation. Next up was the selection of a submission deadline for nominations, which we discussed based on the schedules and obligations of our members. We settled on Friday, February 22 at 5 p.m.

I then volunteered to take care of updating the various materials the committee uses to solicit and accept nominations:

Our Call for Nominations that appears every six business days in the Rowan Announcer from mid- October to late February

Our Electronic Nomination Forms through which members of the campus community — students, faculty, and staff — can nominate individuals for the three awards. These nominations are based — on specific criteria included on the nomination form.

We also discussed a new way to publicize the nomination process: Sending a letter to all department chairs on campus encouraging them to share the reminder with their faculty members and staff. This le tter was sent out on February 6, 2019, about three weeks before the nomination submission deadline.

With the website up and running, successfully accepting applications, and with our weekly Announcer items running as scheduled, we settled in to wait for the Feb. 22 deadline when we would meet again to review the nominations and make our selections.

This is when the angst and excitement began.

I sat down on Saturday morning, February 23 to download the nomination forms from the three sites and put them i n a shared Google Drive to share with the committee. They were going to read each document in the three categories and make their selections. We then planned to meet about a week later to discuss our thoughts on the nominations as a group and decide on the winners.

When I went into the site, I found out I only was able to see the names of the seniors that were nominated, but was not able to download the accompanying files. This revelation set off a series of email exchanges over the next two weeks with cur rent and former committee members, the university IRT office, and eventually with Faculty Senate President Bill Friend, who helped bring the problem to resolution.

The problem ended up being that a former member of the committee – the person who set up the automated system to collect nominations a few years ago – did not make the Google Drive public, meaning only she could access the data stored within.

This two- week delay caused us to cancel our in -person meeting for discussion and selection of our winne rs and I created a new group Google Drive as soon as the files were accessible. We received nine nominations for the Lynch Award, eight for the Robinson Award, and one for the Bole Award.

Now that everyone could read and evaluate the nominations, we held an online vote where committee members sent me their top three selections for the two awards being contested. (After reviewing the one Bole Award nominations, we agreed this person was deserving of the honor and his "win" was confirmed.)

As the committee ballots began hitting my inbox, the results could not have been clearer. Both votes were 7- 1 in favor of the eventual winners. I shared the results with the full committee and thanked the members for their service.

One additional point on the nominations and voting: One student nominat5 (p)10nwd4-3 (ng)12 ((s f)7 (c

2018-2019 COMMITTEE SUGGESTIONS & RECOMMENDATIONS

First of all, the committee as a whole strongly recommends we stay together as a group, and the members said they would like me to remain as chairman. We believe this will bring consistency and continuity to the committee and that it's important to have people in place who have gone through the process before and have encountered problems they then went on to solve.

We plan to meet maybe a week or two earlier in October (ma ybe even late September) to open the nomination process a bit earlier and begin getting the word out about the awards.

We will redesign, and open to all committee members, the websites and Google Drive files that are used to collect and distribute the nomi nations.

In addition to using Rowan Announcer, we want to get publicity on campus through The Whit and on WGLS. This would be accomplished with a fall and a spring feature article and various announcements in the newspaper along with several Rowan News
