C
Health Care Is Not Free in the United States

Unlike many countries, the United States does not have a national medical care program to cover all health care. Since individuals must pay their own medical expenses   which can add up to a lot of money   most Americans purchase health insurance either through their school, employer, or individually, to help pay their medical costs.

Even if you have insurance